Greetings from the editor

2014 is almost history, and the holiday season is upon us. During these busy weeks, it's important to stop and become psychically aware of our surroundings. As always, we at Crystal Clear Psychics are here to help you do just that.

In this month's magazine, we look at the psychic origins of Christmas. Is there more to 25 December than meets the eye? Plus, check out our guide to spiritually-charged gifts, and give you loved one something truly meaningful this year.

We also look at the beautiful and talented Jennifer Connelly. This fiery Sagittarius was born in the dark of December, and has risen to the heights of the film world. What psychic and astrological influences helped her do it?

Finally, we feature our superbly talented psychic Rose (pin 7793). In a special Q&A, she discusses her early psychic experiences, how her psychic vision works now, and what tools she uses to augment her work with clients.

As a special offer, all calls to Rose this month will be half price... just quote RoseOffer to claim your half price call.

We thank you for being a valued client, and continue to strive toward being the most respected psychic service in the UK.

Love and Light

Crystal Clear Psychic Rose discusses how she discovered her psychic talents, and how they help her clients now.

When did you first discover you were psychic?

When I was a small child around the age of six, I quickly came to the understanding that I had something that was normal in my eyes, but was very different from other children and adults I knew. I could sense what had happened to someone in their past, and could see the outcome of certain situations. I could feel energy vibrations, and visualise beautiful colours around people.

What are your talents and what do they mean? I.e. Clairvoyant?

I see in pictures, like a film within my third eye, snippets of your past, present and future. This is my clairvoyant skill at work. I also pick up and feel your personality and how you are feeling. Sometimes this happens the very moment we make contact. I do this by hearing the vibration of your voice, and linking in to your emotions and those of the people around you. I have empathic intuition whereby I can at times feel your pain and sense the impact situations have had on you.

What tools do you use and why? What is their history?

I use the Rider Waite Tarot deck which is one of the oldest decks in tarot history. It guides me in your reading, linking with my psychic skills. My Spirit guide is a young boy named "Paul" who came to me as a child and has never left my side. He assists in bringing loved ones through to me, so that they can pass a message on to you. I also am guided by my angel. I like to enlighten and brighten all my readings by only using my gifts in a positive, uplifting and empowering way.

One remarkable story from a recent client?

I once used my mediumship skills for a client who wished to speak to a friend who had passed over. I tuned in to my client and the gentleman she wished to hear from. My client asked me "Am I ever going to see him again in this life time?" I said, "Yes, you already have. Look towards the light in your sitting room. He tells me you have seen him already." She explained after I told her this that she had recently taken a picture in her living room, and there in the reflection of her television was her friend standing right in the middle of the screen. I passed on the messages he had for her, and this gave her great comfort.

Why do you enjoy working for Crystal Clear Psychics?

Because this company is so professional and caring. Every one of our clients matter to us. We are genuine and supportive to every single individual that we are privileged to help, support, and enlighten!

Jennifer Connelly's psychic signature has attracted big-time roles and critical praise since her adolescence in New York City—but this actress's secret weapon is the ability stay grounded, centered and focused on life's simple joys.

Child of December

Jennifer Connelly's film roles have a magical quality of journeying into the imagination. At the tender age of 16, she overcame the dark charms of David Bowie in the children's classic The Labyrinth, and forever captured a place in the hearts of audiences around the world. Since then, she has claimed acting's top prize, become a human rights ambassador for Amnesty International, and frequently appeared on "most beautiful people" lists.

There's something in Jennifer's piercing blue eyes that draws our attention like a magnet. If we look beyond her physical beauty, and take her psychic qualities into account, we might be able to find out what that something is.

Jennifer was born on the 12th of December, 1970 in Cairo, New York. That makes her a Sagittarius in the Chinese year of the Dog. As a young girl, she wasted no time in showing the imagination and curiosity of her Western Zodiac sign. While attending arts school in New York City, a family friend suggested Jennifer try her hand at modeling. This quickly led to print and TV gigs—and if you can believe it, a foray into Japanese pop music. Jennifer recording a pair of songs for the Japanese market at the age of 16, and even sang in Japanese.

Her first film audition was for a role that include a ballet scene. With no training, Jennifer gave her best imitation of a ballerina, and got the job. Before she knew it, film roles were coming left and right. Jennifer's first leading role—not surprisingly for a Sagittarius, was in the 1985 film Phenomena. She played a girl who uses psychic powers to communicate with insects, in order to track down a criminal.

Success was already knocking on Jennifer's door, but she was not over-the-moon for lights and glamour. Her Chinese Dog-nature gave her a grounded nature, and kept her loyal to simple things like family and solitude. She would later describe acting as something she fell into rather than pursued. The attention did not always suit her, and she regretted not having more time for inner-reflection. Had she been born under a different Chinese sign, she might not have had such reservations. But that's part of what draws us to Jennifer. Although she has that glamorous twinkle in her eye, there is something simple and endearing about her.

Jennifer's Gemini moon also played a part in her performances and character choices. She has played a victim of blackmail, a lesbian college student, an activist, a heroin addict, and the wife of a mathematical genius in A Beautiful Mind, for which she won an Academy Award. Her Mercurial nature is one reason why she plays such a stunning variety of characters in compelling ways.

When it comes to her personal life, Jennifer's Dog nature seems to have the greatest influence. Despite having reached stardom at a tender age, and sustained a high profile through the years, she lacks the long and turbulent romantic resumé that many film stars end up with. The Dog is a careful, caring lover that values loyalty above all else. She married British actor Paul Bettany in 2003, and the couple's third child was born in 2011.

Jennifer's recent turn in the biblical epic Noah proves that she is still a strong, relevant presence in cinema—when she wants to be. Her intriguing blend of psychic energies lends a fascinating quality to the characters she portrays, yet her Dog nature gives her career—and her life—a humble and down-to-earth grace note.

Horoscopes • December 2014

Aries

Your appetite to join in with the festive celebrations is boosted as Mars moves into Aquarius on the 5th. This is perfect for enhancing the seasonal ambience and potentially making this an exuberant party month for you. It's also important because Saturn changes signs and moves into Sagittarius. Things may gradually begin to improve on a financial level too. You might also develop a serious interest in study or travel as the month and year come to a close.

Cancer

The chances are you'll have plenty of invites and perhaps even a clinch or two under the mistletoe this festive season. At the same time, tensions which ramped up last month from Uranus's square to Pluto continue, suggesting it may be time to think again around your career or future prospects. If you are not gaining personal satisfaction any more, a new start in a fresh setting might be what you need.

Taurus

Your zone of career and ambition bursts into life, stirring your enthusiasm for progress. You may find opportunities appear out of the blue, ones that can inspire you to be positive and progressive. You might also find that your romantic options improve, and especially when you can push yourself into new situations. You could also be inspired to work at improving your finances from December 23rd.

Leo

The stars shower some romantic magic upon you, and can see you much more proactive about reaching out to those you are attracted to. This influence can also enhance a current relationship or stir passions within it. The focus then shifts to lifestyle issues, but your gift for organisation will as usual, see you highly tuned to ensuring everyone's Christmas time is a success.

Gemini

The Full Moon in your sign on December 6th gets this festive month off to a boisterous start, and this can be an ideal date to stage a seasonal get-together. The fun continues whatever your relationship status, as your social life has every chance of blossoming. Yet, if you are a free spirit, the move of Saturn later in the month, could see you thinking more carefully about romantic possibilities.

Virgo

The Full Moon in Gemini on December 6th puts you in the spotlight, and could also bring an opportunity your way that you may have coveted for some time. This is also a month when Mars is set to help you work very hard on any issue that requires concentration but also passion. Furthermore, with Saturn switching signs in week four, where you live, how and who with can also start to be transformed.

Libra

It looks like a busy month is in store for you Libra, and you may find that plenty of visitors will keep you occupied at home. A festive romance is also a possibility, or at least a chance to add sparkle to a relationship you're already in. Yet tensions can build, with differences between you and someone close coming to a head. See this as a chance to clear the air and revitalise the tie.

Capricorn

Relax when you can early in the month, as you'll likely get busier as December gathers pace. The first few weeks are excellent for getting your bearings before you dive into action over the festive season and New Year. Yet, the exact Uranus Pluto link on December 15th could stir up personal issues, and especially with someone at home. This could be a make or break scenario.

Scorpio

The tension between Uranus and Pluto heats up again this month, prompting you to let go of certain things in your life that are no longer working for you. In addition, although you'll be in a generous mood for much of the month, you may feel motivated from December 23rd to start to be much more frugal with your resources. This is set to be a trend for the next couple of years.

Aquarius

Mars hot foots it into your sign on the 5th, enhancing your resolve to get on with projects and personal plans and filling you with a renewed enthusiasm. At the same time, this is a chance to catch up with yourself and renew your commitment to key goals. There's plenty of fun to be had too with friends Aquarius, and you can love the show of their loyalty and support you receive.

Sagittarius

With a cluster of planets in your sign early in December, you can set in motion all sorts of new initiatives and projects. Ironically, with Saturn entering your sign too, some old strands may come to a close. The stars are asking you to prioritise like never before, and this could see you narrow your focus. Pleasingly, a windfall of some kind is possible just before Christmas.

Pisces

Full Moon night on December 6th brightens up your home zone, making this a sparkling date to be with those who really count. In addition, fresh opportunities career-wise can bring excitement and may lead to a more serious commitment to one particular goal or ambition further down the line. However, you might look to handle your personal finances responsibly, to ensure less seasonal hassle.

The Psychic Origins of Christmas

Nobody can deny the importance of Christ's birth in the spiritual history of the world. But what isn't known—to the surprise of many—is the exact date his birth took place, or even the time of year. So why do we celebrate the birth of Christ on 25 December? Are there deeper, psychic reasons why this date is associated with the appearance of divinity on earth?

First, let's look at what ancient cultures thought of this date. In Babylon, 25 December was recognised as the birthday of the queen of heaven's son—in other words, the prince of heaven. In Egypt, 25 December was hailed as the birthday of Isis's son. In ancient Arabia, the moon herself was born on 24 December.

Ancient Slavic peoples had their own interpretation. The observance of Velja noc or "Great Night," which took place in late December, was a commemoration of Veles, the god of the underworld. Veles was known especially for sending spirits to the world of the living as his messengers. Sound familiar?

We're not done yet—we can add the ancient Romans to the list. Their festival, widely considered one of the main influences on modern day Christmas, was called Saturnalia. It took place on 21 December, was celebrated in honor of the god Saturn. There were banquets, gifts, and loud parties. Incidentally, this is the day the sun moves into the constellation of Capricorn, which is ruled by Saturn!

So where does the Christian tradition come in? It was the middle of the 4th century when Christ's birth began its association with this mysterious, widely recognised date. There are many theories about why 25 December was chosen, but we're not here to join that debate. What interests us is the universal spiritual symbol that this time of year represents—not only for ancient cultures, but for one of the most widely practiced religions of the modern age.

The common thread is plain to see. In late December, even though it's barely perceptible, the days begin to grow longer. The scales tip toward the power of light. This "birth of light" is naturally associated with the birth of divine personages and the honoring of spiritual forces. It's a moment where spiritual energies and natural rhythms are perfectly aligned, and it touches something deep in the core of our beings.

Christmas is truly a special time—not only because of the rich religious and pagan traditions associated with it, but because of our profound, intuitive recognition of the presence of spirit on earth.

SPIRITUAL GIFT GUIDE

The first Christmas gifts—gold, frankincense and myrrh—had strong spiritual properties, and were meant to acknowledge divine qualities in a person. If you're tired of the fruitcake and sweater routine this year, consider giving a gift that inspires spiritual and psychic growth!

SINGING BOWL

Tibetan singing bowls have been used for centuries to clear negative energies and create an atmosphere of inner calm. They range from small, silver models with no markings to hand-made pieces adorned with Tibetan mantras. Tapping the bowl sends a pleasant, cleansing vibration throughout the room, much like a ripple through a pond. Running the mallet around the bowl's edge generates a sustained tone for deeper vibrational work.

AROMATHERAPY

Essential oils, natural candles and fine incense work magic through our highly-spiritual sense of smell. They've been used for centuries to bring about peace, well-being, and treat ailments. Many aromatherapy gift sets come with a book, so your recipient can learn about the practice. The most healing aromatherapy products are those that come from natural plant essences, and are produced without chemicals.

CRYSTAL PENDANT

Crystal pendants offer protection, good luck, and mental balance for your gift recipient. There are countless types of crystal, each with a different energetic vibration, so it's important to do a bit of research. Knowing your recipient's astrological sign and personality traits can help you choose the right crystal—but let your intuition have the final say.

FENG SHUI CONSULTATION

If you can afford it, giving a gift certificate for a Feng Shui consultation can make an amazing difference in the daily life of your recipient. Our homes and offices—much like our bodies—have an energetic flow. An expert knows how to eliminate blockages and create a freer circulation of energy. Your recipient can even work on specific goals through Feng Shui, such as finding a partner or attracting more money.

BONSAI TREE

The Japanese have been cultivating miniature Bonsai trees for thousands of years, and the Chinese, with their practice of Penjing, have been doing it even longer. Also known as tray scenery, this gift is more than just an ornament—it's a meditative exercise of pruning, cultivation, and harmony with nature. Consider accompanying your gift with an elegant book on the art of Japanese Bonsai.
