from the editor

The Sun has completed another journey through the Zodiac. There's a whole world of spiritual growth just waiting to be explored, and this month's issue gives you a head start! First, we look at Feng Shui techniques to attract or improve love in your life.

Plus, we explore the spiritual properties of colours, and how to use them in daily life to achieve specific aims. We see millions of different colours each day, but how often do we consciously connect with the psychic energies they represent?

Finally, there are pop singers and reality TV stars, and then there is Victoria Beckham. This household name and global fashion icon has certainly been blessed with good luck—but there are other spiritual forces at work in her life. On the verge of her 41st birthday, we look at the psychic traits that have shaped who she is today.

Our featured reader this month is Neelam, whose psychic talents were recently featured on the local news in Buckinghamshire, where she resides. Ever popular with clients, Neelam combines her mystical gifts with a pragmatic, scientific approach that engages clients on both a mental and intuitive level. You've got to see for yourself!

Thank you again for being a client of the most respected psychic service in the UK! We consider it an honour to help you on your life's unique journey.

Love and Light,

Lauren X

Neelam Jagasia cannot describe what she does exactly. A psychic psychologist/astrologer is one possible description, although it's easier to say that she helps people. She holds a Masters degree in occupational psychology from Birkbeck College, but many of her other tools—astrology, Christianity and psychic gifts—do not fall so much on the academic side of things. The combination of science and mysticism is at the heart of her healing practice.

"Whatever I do, I back it up with science." She says. "I can help people, for example if they are having problems getting work but they must have faith. I have a unique spirituality and believe that everyone has their own uniqueness about them. I care a lot about people."

Neelam practises at her home in Chorleywood, but her clients come from around the globe. Her services are used by a large cross-section of society, including lawyers and doctors. She prides herself on helping them to believe in themselves, and feels that her own lifestyle—which includes fasting, meditation and yoga—produces a clarity of vision that allows her to be of service.

"Counsellors will listen to you, and psychologists will analyse. But I work with people. I believe in diversity and address every client differently. My approach is bespoke—all these disciplines have something good in them, but the real magic happens when you combine the best of them all."

Neelam may lead her clients deep into psychic territory during readings, but it's not all serious. Her advice for single people who are looking for love? Give flowers away.

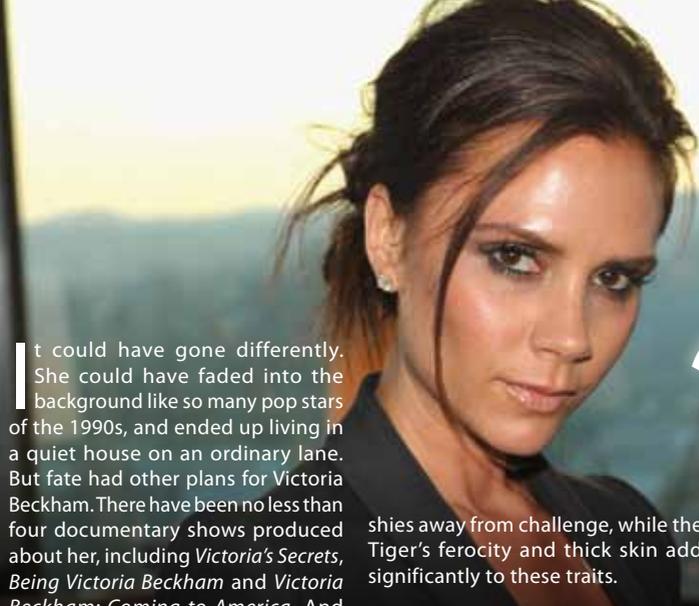

"There are different ways that people can experience love. I sometimes give flowers to my mum."

Creating and expanding love in one's life is one of the main things Neelam hopes to instill in the people she helps.

"I believe in all people and their passion and that is what has made me a good reader. People come to me and what I do is I take aspects of psychology that are needed, I have a passion for astrology too and I back everything up with science. I go above and beyond. My service is so unique and I can't even label myself as I take things from different places. The Indian side of me is very spiritual, I see the good in people."

It could have gone differently. She could have faded into the background like so many pop stars of the 1990s, and ended up living in a quiet house on an ordinary lane. But fate had other plans for Victoria Beckham. There have been no less than four documentary shows produced about her, including Victoria's Secrets, Being Victoria Beckham and Victoria Beckham: Coming to America. And now, beyond the lingering public fascination with her celebrity, she has become a globally respected fashion icon—all while being a mother to four children and wife to one of the world's most recognisable men.

Surely blind luck does not explain it. Victoria's unique astrological signature offers insight into why the world is so fascinated by her life—and why, on the verge of turning 41, her star is burning more brightly than ever.

Victoria Caroline Beckham was born on 17 April, 1974. This makes her an Aries born in the year of the Tiger, and if any combination of signs is sufficiently fierce and fiery to climb the ranks of stardom, this is it. Aries is a ruthless competitor and never shies away from challenge, while the Tiger's ferocity and thick skin add significantly to these traits.

She also enjoyed something of a head start due to her family's wealth. Jacqueline and Anthony, Victoria's parents, founded a wholesale electronics company which kept the family a bit more than comfortable—and endowed young Victoria with a sense of business savvy that would serve her well in later life.

So what was it that lit a fire in Victoria during those early years? Without a doubt, the answer is dance. She studied ballet from an early age, and by 17 was enrolled in the dance programme at Laine Arts Theatre College in Surrey, England. Tigers are often graceful and commanding in their physical movements, which would have factored into her studies—but it was that inherent star power that gave Victoria's career a meteoric lift. She stood in line with 400 other hopefuls when manager Chris Herbert held auditions for all-female pop group, but her special presence was recognised immediately. In that moment, Victoria's life changed forever. Her Aries-Tiger combination would be instrumental in selling the strong, independent, "girl power" image that made the Spice Girls a global force.

All that strength and firepower is good, and necessary to push through the fiercely competitive world of entertainment and fashion—but it can create problems if left unchecked. The Aries spirit can be downright confrontational, while Tiger can be so thick-skinned as to seem detached. Fortunately, Victoria has many factors in her chart that lend a cooling aspect to her personality. Venus and Jupiter in watery Pisces, as well as the Moon in highly social Aquarius, are two examples. Her personal ambitions are balanced by a global perspective (Aquarius) and psychic sensitivity to others (Pisces). Her involvement with charities such as Save the Children, the Elton John AIDS Foundation, and PETA speak for themselves. On top of that, her 16 year marriage to one of the world's most desired men, and the couple's four children, are proof that celebrity status is not the only department in which she has staying power.

So what awaits this unique personality in her 5th decade of life? All signs point toward a heightened influence in the fashion world, and continued dedication to family life. While another Spice Girls reunion may be a long way off, the feisty personality that captured hearts around the globe will undoubtedly continue to shine.

THE IMPORTANCE OF FAMILY IS EXPLAINED BY THE SENSITIVE ASPECTS IN VICTORIA'S CHART.

April 2015

Check out today's horoscopes at crystalclearpsychics.co.uk/horoscopes.html

Aries

The way you say it is important, as there can be times this month when you'll need to choose your words carefully. The Lunar Eclipse on April 5th may be one of them, as some key relationships could be tested. However, the New Moon in your sign on April 18th also paves the way for a fresh start, and it seems a more down-to-earth one at that, Aries.

Cancer

Conflicts concerning your ambitions versus home and family affairs could show up in the first week, especially if an opportunity comes your way that turns out to be too good to miss. In this respect, your network of friends can both be key and very supportive. Meanwhile, the New Moon on April 18th encourages you to aim high in order to achieve your goals.

Taurus

Mars, newly arrived in your sign, can see you ready to put effort into the development and growth of ideas and projects, though you'll need to pace yourself during the first week to keep your energy levels topped up. Once the Sun eases into your sign on April 20th, your strength and vitality can soar further, leaving you ready for almost any challenge.

Leo

Should you seek out new horizons or explore options in your immediate locale? The first two weeks of April could bring unexpected events, new opportunities and a need for decisions that encourage progress. The end result may well be a move in a new direction, though you'll still need to tackle any obligations or responsibilities that are ongoing.

Gemini

A romantic attraction can catch you unawares around the time of the Eclipse on April 5th. If you find yourself falling head over heels, hold back, as something you find out later may help you make a more informed decision. Socially, there are plenty of opportunities for making new connections some of which could prove to be very helpful.

Virgo

A practical focus can prevent impulsive moves regarding your financial affairs. Unexpected events or new information around April the 5th might see you scrambling to sort things out in a hurry. However, you'll do best to get all the facts first of all. Later in April, a new associate may be of great help regarding an important personal ambition.

Libra

Letting go may be essential to forging ahead with plans that seem to have been on hold. This is especially so should you find yourself at a crossroads and help you to release aspects of the past and enable you to get back on track. In addition, the New Moon on April 18th can be helpful for collaborating on a project or melting the ice concerning someone you are drawn to.

Capricorn

A combative energy around April 5th can see you thrashing out ideas and resolving conflicts with key individuals. The result could transform your plans for the future and your ideas about what's best for you and those closest to you. If all this sounds like hard work, taking time out for life's pleasures will soon make up for it, Capricorn.

Scorpio

Don't give yourself too much to do during the first two weeks of April, as a disruption to your routines might mean changes are necessary, some of which could turn out to be quite radical. Your social life can buck up too as Mars, and later the Sun in Taurus, encourage you to develop new connections and reach out. You can show a more go-getting attitude around relationships.

Aquarius

Whatever seemed set in stone could be subject to change, as newer and more appealing ideas come into view. A shake-up of your best and brightest plans might result in new opportunities, and as a result more income and friends. However, Venus's move into Gemini can bring lively social and dating options your way.

Sagittarius

Changes within your existing circle of friends or the clubs or groups you're a member of could entice you to explore other opportunities or to consider ideas for entertainment and fun you might not have thought about previously. As a result new doors can spring open, enhancing the chance for greater sociability as well as other golden opportunities.

Pisces

Getting to grips with your finances can help you know where you stand and give you greater control and a sense of security. If you have any pressing issues that need tackling, it really will be best to do it sooner rather than later, for procrastinating will only add stress. Yet, this can also be an excellent month for enhancing your social network and for promoting your talents or a small business.

Feng Shui for LOVE

Create Space

Some of the most powerful Feng Shui is based on common sense. How can you bring love into your life if you don't have the space? If your closet is crammed with clothes, try thinning it out. If your shower is overflowing with products, pair it down to what you use. Create a more open and flowing environment, and envision yourself sharing these spaces with someone special.

Balance Your Bed

If love is the order of the day, tucking your bed into a corner is not the best option. Whenever possible, allow space on both sides of the bed, and flank your sleeping surface with matching decor. If your space doesn't allow this, find other ways to achieve a sense of balance on both sides of the bed. Love is an exchange of energies, and the bed is ground zero!

Think in Pairs

Whether it's artwork, flower vases or end tables, thinking in pairs will infuse your home with romantic vibrations. Try a pair of matching lamps in your bedroom or living area, and never turn one on without the other. Even a pair of red scented candles can be a powerful symbol of union and sharing.

Make Your Kitchen Count

Love and partnership is ultimately about sharing and affirming life. That's why the kitchen is so important. You may not be the world's greatest chef—you may not have cooked a meal in years—but giving your kitchen a warm, organized, functional feel will amplify the love vibrations in your home.

Examine Your Elements

In traditional Feng Shui, love is associated with the elements of earth and fire. The other elements—water, air and metal—obviously have great value in many areas. But earth and fire are more desirable when love is a priority. Scan your home for colors and images that evoke the different elements, and find ways to make earth and fire more prominent.

Say Yes to Ylang Ylang

Ylang Ylang is an essential oil with powerful aphrodisiac and romantic properties. Use an essential oil burner or atomizer to release it directly into the air. You can even apply a drop or two to your clothing, or use it under your pillow. Whatever you do, do it with intention. Don't forget—you're working with real psychic vibrations! that your abode is ready to share.

SPIRITUAL COLORS IN DAILY LIFE

While the human eye can distinguish millions of different colours, the heart and mind can produce a virtually endless stream of thoughts and feelings. It's common knowledge that some relationship exists between the two. For example, a room with black walls gives a much different impression than one with pink or light blue walls. Complete strangers might say hello to you while wearing a dark green vest, while a close friend keeps her distance when you wear white.

The interplay between color and psychic energy is mysterious, and it's impossible to predict with 100% accuracy how certain colors will affect your world. The good news is, you can learn from your own experience! Dress, decoration, and even just connecting with different colours when you notice them, are all valid methods of study. For starters, let's take four basic colors and explore their psychic properties.

Red

This is a color of energy, passion, and the root chakra. Just look at the predominance of red on Valentine's Day! But that's not all—red is forthrightness, aggression and even anger. When we say that someone is "seeing red," we mean that anger has taken hold of them—and although we should use this colour carefully, its energy is not all bad. Red can activate confidence and a zest for life. But because of its power, red should be used consciously!

Green

This calming, cooling color is perhaps the most life-affirming there is. The world of vegetation is characterized by so many brilliant shades of green, and when we use this colour, we align ourselves with peaceful vibrations of life. It's also the color of the heart chakra. Use green to connect with good luck, prosperity, peace and forgiveness. But if you overuse it, you might attract envy!

Indigo

If there is one colour most representative of psychic gifts and talents, it's indigo. We're inspired to seek truth and go beyond our five senses when we see this colour. This is the colour of the third-eye chakra, which represents spiritual vision. Bringing more indigo into your life can strengthen your intuition and psychic abilities. It can also give relaxation—but frequent use of indigo makes earthy colours like green and brown all the more necessary.

Yellow

This is a warming, reassuring colour that brings healing vibes into your world. It's the colour of our sun, and therefore vital to life as we know it. Most of us have noticed that sitting in a yellow space makes us feel happy, congenial, and accepting of others. Yellow is also the colour of the third chakra, or solar plexus. It gives us a sense of personal sovereignty and confidence—but if yellow is overused, it can actually reduce confidence. Hence the term "yellow" is sometimes used to indicate cowardice.

Is your curiosity peaked? There's a whole world of colour out there, and each one brings unique vibrations into our world. Learn more about spiritual colours, chakras, and what colours are good for your current situation by calling our talented psychics today!
